The Woodruff Arts Center Announces Streaming Media Capability

Atlanta, GA (March 31, 2008) – The Woodruff Arts Center announced the installation of a state-of-the-art streaming media system complete with live webcasting capabilities in the Rich Theatre located on the Woodruff Arts Center campus.

“Webcasting has redefined how our internal and external customers communicate with their audiences,” said Vice President of Operations Michael Flood. “It inspires new possibilities and allows the Woodruff Arts Center to deliver superior service and amenities on our campus.”

The newly-installed webcasting system features live streaming of both audio and video, including presentation slides, from the Rich Theatre’s 419 seat facility. This technology, coupled with the Rich Theatre’s existing audio-visual capabilities, creates an ideal space for corporate presentations, annual meetings, symposiums, performances and other types of events viewable in real-time to invited website guests.
